11. Brief Description of the Property: Constructed in the late 1930s with a rear mudroom added in the 1940s, 815 Dunlap Street sits about 200 feet west of St. Francis Drive, a 1960s highway dividing the Westside-Guadalupe neighborhood. The house is a one-story adobe rectangle that sits near the front of its lot. It faces the street with a lopsided façade caused by a non-historic solar greenhouse on the left side. The side elevations are more consistent but have also undergone alterations. The lower-roofed rectangle mudroom is attached to the back of the house. The home has two bedrooms and one bathroom, encompassing approximately 1,360 square feet. Lining the back wall is a frame garage and storage structure connected to an adobe outbuilding. These structures are accessible via a driveway running along the west side of the home. The house is designated Non-Contributing to the Westside Guadalupe Historic District. Continued on Page 5.

South (Front) Elevation

What first catches the eye is the bulky attached greenhouse. Measuring 50 square feet, this c.1970-80s addition disrupts the modest composition and balance of the building’s façade (Photo 2). Built for growing food, its fiberglass panels are now clouded with a color reminiscent of aged parmesan (Photo 3). Behind the greenhouse and visible only from the interior is a 12-light door, which may have been relocated from the front entry (Photo 4)(Fig. 1). Based on the façade’s assumed symmetry this opening likely started as window.¹

The current front entry is fitted with a modern six-panel metal door. A large 8/8 hung-sash wood window completes the façade’s composition (Photo 5). The window has simple strip wood muntins and putty-glazed lights. Like all the other wood windows along the house, it is in poor condition, with paint deteriorating to reveal bare wood. A heavy concrete lug sill terminates its opening.

The façade has a gray coat finish. Its parapet is capped with small, nub-like projections, suggesting a late Mission influence or a builder’s whimsy.

West Elevation

Looking over the driveway, the west elevation has an almost comical undulating parapet, cut with deep openings to hold canales (Photos 6 & 7). The elevation presents a motley array of windows, most of which are older wood units. They are positioned at varying heights. With the exception of a sliding unit in the bathroom, they all are 6/6 wood hung sash (Photo 8). They sit in the same position as the front window and have similar strip-wood muntins and concrete lug sills. A sliding vinyl unit at the center has been added since 1985. The last 16’ of the elevation holds the mudroom addition (Photo 9). The vigas of the original portion of the house have been shorn off since 1985 (Fig. 1).

North Elevation

This side of the building represents the mudroom extension. Built before 1948, it consists of one large room which provides access to the basement. Its openings are concentrated toward the east end (Photo 10). They comprise a more recent 10-light wood door with an adjacent 6/6 hung-sash window. These units are almost flush with the outside wall, suggesting a more recent installation. This aligns with the 1985 survey, which highlighted the mudroom’s northeast corner as an “exposed shed.” A 1950-’60s steel combination window sits near the center of the façade. It has the same type of lug sill as the older windows. At the ground level, a few cellar windows give light to the basement.

East Elevation

The east elevation once faced a home (813 Dunlap) associated with the property. Since the 1950s, the properties have gone under separate ownership. A vine-covered fence separates them and obscures this side of the house from public view (Photo 11). The elevation begins at the south with three 8-light wood casements arranged in the living room (Photo 12). Beyond this to the north are two 6/6 hung sash windows with the same construction details as the others in the house (Photo 13). Both sets of windows have concrete lug sills.

Bumping out four feet is the beginning of the mudroom. A 6/6 sash window topped with a wooden header penetrates its short south wall. The window is placed flush to the surface, suggesting later installation (Photo 14). The remainder of the east elevation holds three 6/6 hung sash windows divided by mullions (Photo 15). The window’s location near the wall surface indicates a different construction period than the main part of the house. The 1985 survey states this part of the building had aluminum windows.

Ancillary Structures

Two connected outbuildings are located at the north end of the property. They consist of a roughly 600-square-foot wood-frame garage and storage area, along with an attached 400-square-foot adobe outbuilding.

Garage/Storage Area

Taking up the northwest corner is a wood frame structure capped with a corrugated metal roof (Photo 16). Weathered vertical boards sheath its south elevation. A wide roll-up metal door provides vehicular entry. Adjacent to the east is a modern pedestrian door. This structure may have started as the gabled roof building shown in a 1950s aerial (Fig. 8), which was described in the 1985 survey as an “old garage.”

Outbuilding

A flat-roofed, square-plan adobe building stands at the opposite corner (Photo 17). The building is covered with a gray coat of stucco and features a plywood door along with a small single-light window on its south elevation. Its original purpose is unclear; the 1985 survey describes it as “storage.” Aerial photographs from the 1950s (Fig. 8) show that the structure has retained its overall ground plan into the present day.

Historical Overview

The West Additions

Sitting next to the original city limits, the former Sanchez property is linked to the westward expansion of Santa Fe that occurred in the late 19th and early 20th centuries as development spread beyond the original town core. The arrival of the railroad in 1880 spurred the original subdividing trend. Its most substantial presence lay to the south, in the Don Gaspar area, where railroad investors purchased raw land and had professional surveyors turn it into residential tracts.

Subdividing was not restricted to the southside but also occurred west of the railroad, over former farmland. A few Anglo investors purchased sections of acequia land and staked out residential additions with the hope of turning a profit.

One of these, the melodious-sounding Pleasant View Addition, was located close to the subject property (Fig. 2). Platted in 1887 and owned by a pool of investors, Pleasant View turned former cornfields into a grid of tidy 25’ x 220’ residential lots. But sales were poor, and the subdivision went dormant. The residential development of the greater Westside would take another 50 years to achieve. This time, it was primarily local families doing the subdividing.

The Sofia O. Sanchez Subdivision

In the 1890s, much of the land in the immediate area — including the future house lot — was owned by Ambrosio Ortiz. As shown on old maps, his land consisted of a nearly three-acre tract stretching between Ambrosio Street to the east, to what would become St. Francis Drive to the west, Dunlap Street on the south, and Alto Street on the north, where he maintained a home (Figs. 2 & 3).

Born in 1837, eleven years before American occupation, Ortiz quickly adapted to the new culture. In his long career, he served in many local political positions, including, at various times, county clerk, county treasurer, probate judge, and deputy. His obituary called him one of the “best-known Spanish Americans in this city.”² He was also a farmer, and his farm was recorded in the 1914 hydrographic survey as being planted with a mix of corn and alfalfa (Fig. 4)

Don Ambrosio Ortiz died four years after the survey at the age of 78. His property was divided among his heirs. His oldest son, Juan José Ortiz, would get a portion of the land containing the subject property. An affidavit shows that he sold it in 1925 to Josefina A. Delgado.³ Delgado, a young abstractor working on her own, transferred a section of the property to Sofia O. Sanchez, though a deed that wasn’t recorded at the time, but affirmed later with a deed in 1931.⁴

Sofia O. Sanchez, the wife of former Mora and San Miguel County politician Blas Sanchez, Sr. (Fig. 5), later subdivided the property into what was officially recorded in 1933 as the Sofia O. Sanchez Subdivision. The lots were designated A through H. This appears to be the first Santa Fe subdivision created by a woman.

On Lot A, Sofia and Blas built an adobe gabled house, which still stands next to the subject property at 813 Dunlap Street. City directories and the 1930 census suggest it was built in the early 1930s.⁵ They were both in their 60s at the time, and it likely served as their retirement home.

In 1933, Sofia and Blas deeded the lot to the west, Lot B, to their oldest son, Blas Sanchez, Jr.⁶ It was on this lot that Blas Jr. built the subject house at 815 Dunlap Street.

The Funeral Man

Born in 1907 in Wagon Mound, Mora County, Blas Jr. did not follow his father’s profession. Instead, he became a mortuary man. In 1937, he and J. F. Baca founded the Baca-Sanchez Funeral Home (Fig. 5). It was located on East Marcy Street, now the site of Marcy Plaza office center, and was one of four funeral homes operating in Santa Fe.⁷ Like the competing Herrera Funeral Home, it was directed toward the Hispanic population.

Blas Jr. started his career in the funeral business as an assistant for the Rising-Roberts Mortuary, one of two Anglo funeral homes operating in Santa Fe at the time. He later became a funeral director, an industry term elevating the position of what was formally called an undertaker. As a funeral director, he coordinated life’s last necessity: planning for funerals and memorial services, meeting with families at their homes, and processing paperwork.⁸

He married Lucia (Lucy) Frances Salazar in 1929.⁹ Her father, Luis M. Salazar, later became his second business partner. In the 1950s, he bought out Salazar and ran the mortuary under his own name until 1965.¹⁰

City directories suggest that Sanchez built the house at 815 Dunlap in the mid-to-late 1930s. He had previously lived with his parents at 813 Dunlap, and 815 appears as an empty lot on a 1935 aerial image (Fig. 6).

The 1940 federal census recorded Blas Jr., and his family ensconced in their new home. Blas Jr., 32, is indicated to be the owner.¹¹ The property was valued at $1,800, significantly less than his parent’s home next door. The household included his wife, Lucia (Lucy), 28, and sons, Phillip, 11, and Marlin, 7. They were surrounded by other young families, all with Spanish surnames.

His parents gave him a quitclaim deed for the property two years later. Blas Jr. transferred the property and house to his wife two years after that.¹² The deed referenced a six-room home, and this, along with an aerial photograph from 1948 (Fig. 7), suggests the rear mud room extension was built in the 1940s. The couple divorced around the time of the deed transfer.

Subsequently, Blas Jr. married someone 20 years younger and relocated to a property on Cortez Street — the move represented a shift up in Santa Fe’s social stratigraphy.¹³

After the divorce, the house at 815 Dunlap Street went to their two sons, Phillip and Marcos. This was formalized in a deed in 1954 by Lucia, now remarried as Mrs. Ortiz-Porter.¹⁴ The house of this period is documented in an aerial photograph taken in 1958. (Fig. 8).

Phillip Sanchez and the Impact of St. Francis Drive

Phillip Richard Sanchez was born in 1929 and followed in his father's footsteps by entering the funeral business. He attended mortuary school in San Francisco and later worked alongside his father at the family funeral home.¹⁵ In 1951, the same year he joined the Army, he married Nell Loyce Willoughby. Together, they raised several children in the home located at 815 Dunlap Street. The family lived there until the mid-1960s, after which they appear to have rented out the property.

This likely coincided with the development of St. Francis Drive. The west end of Dunlap Street, along with the old Ambrosio Ortiz property, underwent a significant transformation with the construction of the new highway. Completed in 1964, the six-lane road provided a direct route through Santa Fe for U.S. Highways 84 and 285. Its construction cut through a residentially zoned area, leading to the condemnation of multiple homes. It removed the western portion of the old Ortiz property which was bordered by Montoya Street (Fig. 2). As a result, Montoya Street and its eight homes were demolished.¹⁶

The highway divided the community into two distinct neighborhoods. Those fronting or adjacent to St. Francis were subject to noise levels that exceeded the allowable decibel limits for commercially zoned areas. This safety hazard, along with the fracturing of land, led to depressed property values and the call for rezoning in the late 1970s. A 1978 flyover captures this period (Fig. 9).

In 1981, Phillip Sanchez transferred property ownership to Michael Zimmer and Thomas Callanan.¹⁷ Zimmer and Callanan initially lived in the house. A few years later, Callanan moved out, and Zimmer bought out his interest in the property.¹⁸ Zimmer relocated to another property around 1991 and turned the house into a rental, a use that continues today.

Evaluation of Historical Status

House

A 1948 aerial photograph establishes that the footprint of the front building has been in place for over 75 years. Documented changes to this ground plan include what is assumed to be the infill of the northeast corner of the mudroom with solid walls and different windows after 1985.

A fiberglass greenhouse was added to the front elevation in the late 1970s or early 1980s. Although it may seem like a minor detail, this addition appears to have involved the removal of a window to create a door. If the greenhouse were to be removed, the façade would reveal an imbalance of two adjacent doors.

The west elevation reveals mainly intact original or fenestration, aside from the bathroom window. However, a secondary elevation facing a driveway with limited public view would be an unlikely candidate for a primary façade.

Given these considerations, the recommendation is to maintain Non-Contributing status for the house. If the assumed original window opening behind the greenhouse is restored using historical or forensic evidence, the house may be reconsidered for Contributing status.

Ancillary Structures

A non-historic extension connects the two outbuildings. The garage/storage area, with a wide vehicular door and other modifications, does not retain historic integrity. The outbuilding has retained its historic footprint but does not have Contributing factors other than age.

For this reason, the joined buildings are recommended for Non-Contributing status.

BOARD ACTION

This is to certify that the Historic Districts Review Board (HDRB) acted on your request at their hearing on May 13, 2025. The decision of the Board was to designate the residential structure contributing with the east, west, and south elevations as primary excluding the door opening and greenhouse on the south elevation and excluding the non-historic materials, and to designate the storage structure and the garage units as non-contributing. The Board also noted that if the greenhouse were to be removed they would like the door behind it returned to a window.

For further information please call 505-955-6605.

Sincerely,

Lani McCulley
